THIS year marks the 115th anniversary of St Joseph's Hospice in Mare Street.

It is one of the oldest and largest hospices in Britain, looking after 1,700 patients a year. Of these, 1,200 receive care in their own homes. Of the remaining 500, two thirds receive end-of-life care in two inpatient wards.

Sister Florence, who works at the chapel, says: "As I meet relatives, it's the kindness and the acceptance that people experience that I hear about, more than their sadness."

Lucie Owen agrees. She adds: "I thought hospices were places you just came to die.

But I came and it turned my life around. I help with the garden, rest, go on trips to the parks, make friends. It's therapeutic."

On your marks, get set, GROW!

GREEN-fingered residents are invited to show off their gardening skills in a free competition open to anyone who lives, works, or goes to school in the borough.

Hackney in Bloom, now in its eleventh year, celebrates the most beautiful gardens, best-dressed window boxes and blooming balconies, which help make the borough a greener, brighter and better place to live.

Celebrity landscaper and resident, Tommy Walsh, will be on-hand to help judge the entries and hand out prizes – including planters, gardening tools, award plaques, photos and certificates – to the winners.

The ex-'Ground Force' presenter said: "It's great to see so many residents taking a pride in their gardens. The Hackney in Bloom competition is a real showcase of this talent and effort. I look forward to meeting and congratulating all the winners. Good luck everyone.”

This year's competition categories are for the best: front garden; pub and business premises; community garden; housing estate garden; container garden; food growing project or enterprise; young and green-fingered award; and newcomer.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care, and Culture, said: "Hackney in Bloom is an opportunity for people to show how much they care about their gardens and the local environment.

"Every year I'm impressed by the entries: they show how dedicated and hard-working residents are when it comes to making the world around them a more pleasant place to live, work and visit."

The judges will mainly be looking for originality, design, impact, colour, quality and sustainability.

The competition launches on 1 June and closes on 26 June. Judges will visit entrants during the first two weeks of July and winners will be announced at the end of the month. An awards ceremony is set to take place on 10 September.

An artist's impression of the 'tree office' in Hoxton Square, which is set to open in early June EVER dreamt of living in a tree house? Well, now you can (almost) – right in the centre of Hoxton.

Work has begun on the capital's first 'tree office' in Hoxton Square, which is set to provide a unique co-working space for businesses and the community to rent.

Built around a tree trunk, the transparent, weather-proof structure will provide views of the square.

The office can seat up to eight people working on laptops or holding meetings. Income generated from the project, which will be in place for seven months, will go back into the borough's parks and green spaces.

The 'tree office' is being built by the Council, Groundwork London and Arts Admin as part of the Park Hack project. The work, which is funded by charity NESTA, is due to be completed next month.

It has been designed by artist Natalie Jeremijenko in collaboration with artists Shuster + Moseley, architects Tate Harmer, and consulting architects Gensler. A range of other sponsors are set to provide wi-fi, building materials and bespoke office furniture.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: “The Council has partnered with a range of organisations to launch this innovative project which will help provide a unique work space in the heart of the borough's tech cluster that is home to thousands of businesses. “Also helping to generate funding for Hackney's parks and open spaces, the innovative design of the 'tree office' will provide a space not only where people can work and meet, but also to interact with the natural environment – a vastly different experience from working in an office.”

Street festival launches fourth Hackney Cycling Conference

RESIDENTS are invited to a mini street festival outside Hackney Town Hall, and two free film screenings, to mark this year's Hackney Cycling Conference.

The festival, featuring family entertainment, will take place on 5 June, between 9am and 5pm, and will coincide with the fourth annual cycling summit at Hackney Picturehouse. Organised by the Council and Hackney Cycling Campaign (HCC), it will see cycling experts, academics and campaigners gather in London's top biking borough for a day of talks, videos, Q&As and exhibitions, based on the theme of 'investing in cycling'.

The conference will feature speakers including Andy Clarke, President of the League of American Bicyclists; Rodrigo Guerrero Maldonado, from transport consultancy Steer Davies Gleave's Mexico City office; and Andrew Gilligan, London Cycling Commissioner, amongst others. Residents can also attend two exclusive free film screenings at the Mare Street cinema, thanks to a partnership between the BFI and Council.

To complement the conference, HCC is also set to host the second 'Straw Bale Sessions' on 6 June, from 10am to 4pm, at Hackney City Farm. Residents are invited to the free event for talks on the future of cycling in the city. Conference tickets are £35 each and include lunch. Get tickets for both film screenings and the conference at: www.hackneycyclingconference2015.eventbrite.co.uk

Trowbridge Estate fun day residents celebrate their close-knit community

TROWBRIDGE Estate residents celebrated their close-knit community at a fun day last month.

Children enjoyed playing on bouncy castles and getting their faces painted, while adults got involved in bingo, tending to the barbecue and chatting to neighbours.

The event also showcased a 'Trowbridge Estate's Got Talent' competition, which attracted youngsters to the stage to sing and entertain the crowds.

The day was an opportunity for Hackney Homes to consult with residents and ask for their thoughts about possible energy saving improvements to the estate. Energy provider, Climate Energy, was on-hand to provide residents with useful tips on saving money on their energy bills.

Rupert Tyson MBE, Chair of Hackney Homes Board, said: “We continue to provide advice to residents about saving money on energy bills. Fun days on estates are a wonderful way to do this and bring the community together, encouraging residents to get to know their neighbours as well as raising awareness of the services we provide.”

Pat Byrne, Chair of the Trowbridge Tenants and Residents Association, added: “We're a fairly new TRA and the fun day has been a really good turnout.”

The Grade II listed Haggerston Baths is in need of redevelopment. The Council is currently spending around £100,000 a year on building maintenance

Pooling all resources

THE Haggerston Baths building could be redeveloped and reopened if a suitable community or business partner comes forward.

The Council, which owns the iconic, Grade II listed building, is seeking expressions of interest from potential developers.

The Victorian pool closed in 2000 and Hackney is currently spending around £100,000 a year on basic building maintenance and security measures. It would need to find more than £25million just to restore the infrastructure of the building in Whiston Road.

“We would welcome someone with viable, sustainable plans to re-establish use of the barrel-vaulted pool hall”

The Council however, cannot make such an investment following annual Government cuts to funding for the past five years. Instead it is seeking a private, charity or third sector partner to come forward with an innovative scheme to restore the building to public use.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: “We know through the work of the Haggerston Pools Trust the strength of feeling about the baths. For that reason, we will only consider working with an appropriate partner, someone who is prepared to use the building for the benefit of the community.

“We would particularly welcome someone with viable, sustainable plans to re-establish use of the barrel-vaulted pool hall. We would love to be able to invest in the building, but unfortunately, with ever-shrinking resources, we simply cannot prioritise this project. However, we are determined to identify a long-term and sustainable future for the building.”

The baths opened in 1904 and are included in the Victorian Society’s list of the most endangered Victorian and Edwardian buildings in England and Wales, due to their cultural and architectural significance.

Chesham Arms pub to reopen

THE Chesham Arms is set to reopen as a traditional East End pub after a local publican signed a 15-year lease to refurbish the much-loved drinking establishment. The latest milestone in the Chesham story comes a month after the Council granted further planning protection – in the form of an Asset of Community Value – to the 150-year-old building. The ‘Save the Chesham’ group also fought a two-year campaign against the change of use of the pub in Mehetabel Road into a residential property. Now, nearly 1,000 days since the pub closed its doors, publican Andy Bird has signed a lease on the property to refurbish the ground floor and transform it back to a traditional boozer.

Andy said: “Pubs like the Chesham historically have been the focal point of the community, putting the heart and soul into a street for local people, that’s why it pains me to see pubs closing, some that have served for generations. “I want to transform the Chesham back into a traditional East London public house, reflecting its look and feel from when it first opened some 150 years ago.”

Digital Shoreditch success

THE Digital Shoreditch festival, which celebrates the UK’s top creative, technical and entrepreneurial talent, has come to a close after a successful fortnight showcasing the area’s digital expertise.

The Council’s Opportunity Hub featured as one of this year’s ‘must see’ festival venues, with a host of events exploring tech industry employment, skills and training. A base for Ways into Work – a Council service that matches residents to jobs in the borough – the Hub focused on the tech skills gap in the digital industry, and the training local people need to harness the opportunities within Hackney’s creative industries. The Council’s ‘Hackney 100’ initiative, which provides the borough’s young people with London Living Wage work placements to give them a first step on the career ladder, was also showcased.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration, who launched Digital Shoreditch, said: “Hackney is home to an extraordinary range of business, from start up to scaling up, and from local to international, all have a place in our local economy.

“The Council remains committed to supporting its growing business community and connecting these expanding opportunities with Hackney’s local communities.”

Residents including DJ Newton Dunbar (above) shared their memories of a bygone era at a live radio discussion called 'Remembering '65'

"During the 60s we stayed in our community. Even today, there's a song that reminds me of that kind of childhood: 'Don't go chasing waterfalls, keep to the rivers and lakes you know'. You felt safe walking in your own neighbourhood because you could knock on a door, you know that woman who lives there." Gillian Lawrence

Summer of '65

THE London Borough of Hackney, as we know it today, celebrated its 50th birthday this month by encouraging residents to take a trip down memory lane.

In 1965, the boroughs of Hackney, Shoreditch and Stoke Newington were merged to form modern day Hackney. Fifty years on, and in celebration of this milestone, residents shared their memories of a bygone era during a live radio discussion called 'Remembering '65'.

The event at Dalston Eastern Curve Garden on 8 May saw four older residents – Gillian, Moses, Daniel and Stephen – talk with younger residents – Dina, Lucia and Joseph – about what life was like in 1965 and how it compared to today. The group talked candidly about their experiences of growing up in Hackney, and discussed topics such as employment, the cost of living, fashion, trends and socialising.

“What a wonderful way to celebrate Hackney's 50th anniversary”

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "What a wonderful way to celebrate Hackney's 50th anniversary.

"The borough has seen a great deal of change over the years, and it's really interesting to hear people talk about their experiences of Hackney. Projects like this bring people of all ages together and can help bridge the generation gap, and show us that we're not so different after all."

The 'Remembering

'65' project was devised and delivered by Lucia Scazzocchio for the Council.

Most of the recordings took place at Open School East in De Beauvoir with members of Agewell Social Network, Hackney Silver Surfers and Up Your Street.

A short film featuring other intergenerational conversations will form part of an exhibition at Hackney Museum called 'Hackney@50'. A selection of these oral histories will also become part of Hackney Archives.

"I came here in 1960, almost two months before the Beatles. Cliff Richard was already singing and trolley buses were running from Stamford Hill to Aldgate. It cost a sixpence, it was very cheap. I got £5 per week wages at that time, but it was enough, as the rent was only £1.50, it was very cheap." Daniel Haeems (left)

The quality of life

St Joseph's Hospice is one of the largest and oldest in Britain. It turns 115-years-old this year

By Harriet Worsley

LUCIE Owen is sitting in the lightly scented bower of an award-winning garden, indulging in a spot of seedling repotting.

"This is the third time I've come here for a stay," she says. "It always feels like a real treat. I just love it, there isn't a single person here who isn't lovely. At the end of this stay, I'm thinking of chaining myself to the door and refusing to leave."

She isn't talking about a hotel or spa, but rather St Joseph's Hospice, in Mare Street. This year marks the 115th anniversary of the arrival of five Irish, Religious Sisters of Charity – Winefred Sugrue, Mary Sabas O'Connor, Mary Uriel Duffy, Catherine O'Flynn and Agnes Aloysius Martin – who came to Hackney to care for the sick.

Today, the hospice they founded is one of the oldest and largest in Britain. It sees 1,700 patients a year. Of these, 1,200 receive care in their own homes. Of the remaining 500, two thirds receive end-of-life care in two inpatient wards. The remaining third, like Lucie, come for two-week stays on the respite ward, before returning home again.

Lucie explains: "I didn't find out about the hospice till my husband died here, a year ago. They were wonderful to him. When they suggested that I might come in for respite I wasn't keen, I thought hospices were places you just came to die. But I came and it turned my life around. I help with the garden, rest, go on trips to the parks, make friends. It's therapeutic for me."

Michael Kerin, Chief Executive, agrees. He says: "St Joseph's is a place that often defies expectations. Fifty per cent of our patients, for example, go home again after a stay here."

“Neither is it just for the elderly: we care for anyone over the age of 18 who has a life-limiting illness that can’t be cured. And it’s also for the wider community: we want people to get to know us before they actually need us. In the midst of life, death is present, and in the midst of death, life is still present.”

Indeed, as he sits in the hospice's newly built 'hub', evidence of this is all around. Within the bright, modern entrance hall, a group of women are engaged in a colourful craft project, a family cluster around a children's play area, the cafe is doing a brisk trade in lattes to ladies

"Our patients' time is precious so we help them make the most of it." Michael Kerin, Chief Executive

"On Monday, there were five people ready to receive the sacrament of the sick and two who wanted blessings. Relatives always say thank you to me for being there, but to me it is such a privilege and a blessing. As I meet relatives, it's the kindness and the acceptance that people experience that I hear about, more than their sadness." Sister Florence

Michael says: "We have concerts in here, two or three choirs, computer groups, knitting clubs, tai chi and yoga classes. They are all open to the wider community, as well as to our patients.

"You can wander off the street and into our gardens or our chapel to find a moment's peace, just as our patients can choose to spend their time exactly how they want. We treat everyone like an individual and we try to meet their unique needs."

For their younger patients, he says, that might be to visit Hackney's pubs and even nightclubs, in which case a carer will do their best to accompany them.

Sharon Finn, a senior healthcare assistant who recently received the Royal College of Nursing Health Practitioner Member Award, adds: "Sometimes that need is as simple as human touch. Just washing their hair, massaging their scalp can make such a difference. It gives people time to communicate, it builds their confidence, that sense that 'I'm not alone, there are people who do care, there's a place I can come to'.

"It gives people time to communicate, it builds their confidence, that sense that 'I'm not alone'"

"That's what makes the job magical."

On the other side of the hospice, far from the hustle and bustle of the modern 'hub', lies the cool, calm of the hospice chapel. A domed roof arches across a marble floor. Sister Florence says softly: "If someone on a ward wants me, I'll be here. One man, called Ron, just wanted to hold hands with a sister as he died.

"People of all different cultures ask me simply to sit by their bed with them, or to pray for them, at the end of their lives."

Sister Florence is one of a number of retired Religious Sisters of Charity who still volunteer at the hospice, keeping alive a link with its original founders. The hospice now also has prayer spaces for all faiths, and Muslim, Jewish and Sikh

Chaplains as well as Roman Catholic and Anglican.

The hospice relies on an army of 450 volunteers. They man the cafe, read to people, work in admin roles, do complementary therapy, maintain gardens so beautiful that they receive royal visits, and organise jumble sales that raise thousands of pounds. Lots of these volunteers have experienced what it means for a relative to receive care at the hospice.

Anne Baxter is one such volunteer. She says: "Personally, I cared for my mum at the end of her life and I first found the hospice when I came to a carers' group here. When I was grieving, someone suggested I should start volunteering here. It got me out of the house, I made friends, I had something positive to focus on. That was three-and-a-half years ago, and I'll carry on for as long as I can. The patients, volunteers, staff... we're a happy bunch.

"I wish my mum had been able to end her life here, but it's changed mine, and I'm so grateful."

'There's nothing you could wear here that people would be shocked by'

Fashion designer Anna Popovich is inspired by glamorous women; the Raimunda dress (inset) was a homage to Penelope Cruz's character in Almodovar's 'Volver'

By Anne-Marie Oni-Olusola

THE first studio that I had, five years back now, was in Hackney Downs. But I moved to the area about 10 years ago – you just can't get rid of me," says 27-year-old fashion designer Anna Popovich.

The half English, half Serbian, Clapton resident moved to Hackney from Leicester when she was studying literature at King's College London, age 18.

She says: "When I first came to London, I lived quite centrally, but a few of my friends lived round Hackney so I'd go and visit them and we'd go out in this area. It just felt more comfortable here and I really enjoyed everything that was going on."

Despite studying for a degree in Comparative Literature, Anna was determined to break into the fashion industry. She interned for designer Roksanda Ilincic and refined her skills at Central St Martins and London College of Fashion.

One of Anna's greatest influences on her clothing designs today was working in the costume department of theatre and opera companies for a couple of years after she graduated.

Anna says: "I started sewing when I was really, really young. My grandma taught me to embroider and I'd do that just as a hobby."

"The first time I made and designed a dress for someone was probably 10 years ago. It was a bespoke gown for an opera singer. A lot of singers would want something to wear when they went and did a recital."

The self-confessed fabric-fiend uses iconic women like Frida Kahlo, Coco Chanel and Brigitte Bardot as a source of inspiration when creating her collections.

She says: "From a very

"You've got people wearing the most over-the-top outfits here. I really like the fact that there's a lot of freedom" early age I've poured over images of the opulent dresses of the couture houses operating at the turn of the century.

"There's a dress I designed called the Raimunda dress. It's from a collection I did a while back and everyone seems to really respond well to it. The idea came from watching Penelope Cruz's portrayal of oppressed housewife Raimunda in Pedro Almodovar's film 'Volver'."

When she was growing up, Anna loved high fashion clothing, but she found the costs to be prohibitive. As a result, she decided as a designer to concentrate on a direct relationship with her customers, either online or at events.

Anna says: "Our garments are luxury, but we want them to be accessible and we see this as the best way of achieving this."

Anna continues to develop her designs and her fifth collection has just been launched.

Based in a warehouse studio in the industrial surrounds of Hackney Wick, her studio is spacious and cosy at the same time. She has a work desk which, she explains, is for general admin, a sewing machine, mannequins and several garments from her previous collections surrounding her.

Anna says the eccentric fashion sense in Hackney is what she loves the most about the borough, and the chilled, vibrant atmosphere that initially attracted her to the place.

She says: "You've got people wearing the most over-the-top outfits here."

I really like the fact that there's a lot of freedom in that sense.

"There's nothing you could wear here that people would be shocked by. It's quite nice, actually, that everyone feels that kind of freedom with their clothing."

Adding: "Hackney is obviously changing hugely so it will be interesting to see where that goes, but at the moment, it's somewhere I really enjoy living and working."

Anna is holding an open studio on 27 and 28 June as part of Hackney Wicked Open Studios event.

With savings of up to 75%, there's never been a better time to get composting.

It's the most environmentally friendly way of getting rid of your food and garden waste.

The compost produced will also help your plants grow greener. Even if you don't have a garden you can get composting on your patio or balcony with our smaller bins and wormeries.

In Hackney we throw away 18,000 tonnes of food waste per year or 50 tonnes per day!

The Clissold Park butterfly dome is now open to visitors to enjoy for free until 30 September

Getting in a flutter

BUDDING lepidopterists will be all aflutter at the news that Clissold Park butterfly dome has been reopened for the summer.

The dome houses a collection of tropical butterflies, as well as nectar-rich native and tropical plants for them to feed on. New chrysalises appear every fortnight so there's always something different to observe during a visit.

There is a volunteer on hand at all times to answer questions, plus information displays which explain butterfly behaviour and life cycles to visitors too.

The dome offers an educational programme for schools with a chance for youngsters to see colourful butterflies, emerging chrysalises, butterfly eggs and caterpillars.

The dome is open until 30 September. It is located next to the park's deer enclosure and aviary. Tours run at 11am on Mondays; 5pm on Tuesdays; 4pm on Fridays; and 1pm on Saturdays. Entrance is free.

Residents who want to visit as a group should book in advance by e-mailing: lucy.gijsen@hackney.gov.uk

News in brief

Chelsea Fringe programme

DESCRIBED as the 'quirky sister' to the more formal Chelsea Flower Show, the Chelsea Fringe is back and now in its fourth year.

Since the festival was founded, with the dual principles of breaking boundaries and celebrating community and guerrilla gardening, it's perhaps not surprising that Hackney's home-grown horticulturalists are well represented in this year's programme.

Here's what's going on in the borough until 7 June.

Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, until 7 June. Free

A fun-packed fortnight of green-fingered events during half-term and weekends.

The Geffrye Museum almshouse tours, 26 May, 3/6 June at 11am, 12noon, 2/3/4pm. £3

Take a glimpse into the lives of London's poor and elderly in former times.

Horticultural Hackney Walk, 30 May, 2-3.45pm. Free

Retrace the footsteps of gardeners and nurserymen from Shoreditch and Hoxton, from Tudor times to the present day.

Music To Grow Your Garden By, 6 June, 12noon-12.40pm. Free

Madrigals, part-songs and modern favourites are promised at this lunch-time event.

Culpepers Herbal Remedy, 6 June, 2-4pm, £13

Join Margaret Willes for a talk and create remedies and natural cosmetics.

The Poppy Estate, 6 June, 11am-7pm. Free

The Clapton estate's 50 community growing plots will be open.

New 'pocket park' set for Trelawney Estate draws on its historical roots

THE grounds of Trelawney Estate, E9, are being given a new lease of life thanks to a £90,000 makeover.

Work is already underway to transform the outdoor area of the Hackney Homes-run estate in Morning Lane into one of 100 'pocket parks'.

These mini parks have been springing-up across the capital since 2012, creating small areas of green space to provide sanctuary from the hustle and bustle of city life.

The new Trelawney Estate park will not only boast new seating, but also community gardening opportunities, as well as food and habitat for the borough's birds and insects.

The design of the park incorporates many ideas from estate residents who looked into how the grounds could be improved and what facilities should be included in the scheme.

The planting of the new space also draws upon the horticultural history of the site, which was the location of the former Loddiges Nursery. In the late 18th century it was one of the most important nurseries in London, housing the largest hot house in the world at the time, with an unrivalled collection of palms, orchids and ferns which influenced horticultural fashions nationwide.

The makeover is due to be completed by the end of June. The work is funded by the Greater London Authority, matched by the Council.

Do you have an idea for a New Social Enterprise but need funding to set up?

The Beyond Business Programme, Bromley by Bow Centre are offering start up funding for new or emerging Social Enterprises across Tower Hamlets, Hackney and Newham. The Social Enterprise must be located in those Boroughs

What is the Beyond Business Programme?

Beyond Business has already launched a network of 50 plus successful Social Enterprises in the East End and provides:

- Start up funding,
- Strategic and business planning guidance, and
- Practical business support including training, mentoring and pro-bono legal services.

Is my idea for a Social Enterprise eligible?

- To be eligible for a start up grant of up to £17,000 your idea for a Social Enterprise must:
- Have a clear social purpose and outcomes, such as employment for people with barriers to work, youth training, healthy living and local environment improvements.
- Have a sound business proposition and the potential to be financially sustainable without reliance on grant funding.
- Create sustainable employment.
- Be able to legally set up and start trading by end January 2016.

How will Applicants be assessed?

- Stage 1: Applicants submit an expression of interest form for a panel review.
- Stage 2: Applicants successful at stage 1 complete a business plan, with support from the Beyond Business team.
- Stage 3: Applicants successful at Stage 2 present their business idea and plan to an independent Dragons' Den panel on 15th October 2015 - funding then approved for successful applicants.

PREVIEW

Crouch, Touch, Pause, Engage

Until 20 June, Arcola Theatre, 24 Ashwin Street, Dalston, E8 3DL

ON the eve of one of the most important games of his career, Welsh rugby legend Gareth Thomas received a warning: The Sun newspaper was going to 'out' him as gay.

The story of what happened next is on at The Arcola Theatre, in a co-production between National Theatre of Wales and the Out of Joint theatre-company, called 'Crouch, Touch, Pause, Engage'.

► For more info, visit: www.arcolatheatre.com/production/arcola/crouch-touch-pause-engage

Working with Gareth himself, as well as young people in his hometown, writer Robin Soans has woven together the fates of the sporting star, as well as those of two Bridgend teenagers who are keeping secrets of their own. Bridgend was itself a victim of press intrusion following the deaths of several young residents. A six-strong cast share the roles and tell a moving story about sport, politics, secrets, life and learning to be yourself.

ART & EXHIBITIONS

I'M ALWAYS LAZY WHEN I MISS YOU

Until 30 May, Wed-Sat,
12noon-6pm

A sculptural installation by Holly White including collages made using photos from her Tumblr, tie-dyed bedding, beeswax candles, homemade crystals and ceramics. White also presents new video work produced in the space, devised with choreographer Nina von der Werth and dancer Victoria Guy. Free. All ages. Andor Gallery London, 237 Hackney Rd, E2 8NA. Info: 020 7033 9660; www.creativeandorcultural.com

SAVE CHANGES

Until 1 Jun, every day,
9am-5pm

This exhibition will demonstrate the different forms that 'profiling' can take in various media including painting, video, photography and performance. People create alter-egos, pseudonyms and edited versions of themselves. Three artists playfully explore the language being used online, explore what lies behind the image and how this translates into real life. Free entry. Stour Space, 7 Roach Road, Hackney Wick, E3 2PA. Info: 020 8985 7827; www.stourspace.co.uk/portfolio/may-2015/

PROJECT THIN AIR

Until, 14 Jun, Wed-Sat
11am-6pm, Sun 12noon-5pm

Solo exhibit by London painter Alexander Heaton displaying a series of works made and written about in his journal while exploring the limits of creativity at high altitude. Heaton uses glaze media such as oil, and specifically for this show he manufactured his own paints to achieve a more accurate colour spectrum of the subtleties of light bouncing off the surface of glacial ice. Free. All ages. The Residence Gallery, 229 Victoria Park Road, E9 7HD. Info: 020 8985 0321; www.residence-gallery.com/exhibitions/2015/alexander-heaton_projectthinair

THE WISDOM OF HINDSIGHT

Until 27 Jun, every Tues-Sat, 10am-6pm

To celebrate 30 years since his first solo show, John Keane presents a series of works exploring the theme of military, social and political conflict around the world.

Free. All ages. Flowers Gallery, 82 Kingsland Rd, E2 8DP. Info: 020 7920 7777; www.flowersgalleries.com/exhibitions/flowers/2015/john-keane-the-wisdom-of-hindsight/

GESTURES AND MUDRAS: DRAWING OBSERVATION

4 & 5 Jun, 10.30am-12.30pm

Participants will learn about the connection between gesture and embodied movement focusing on Sanskrit – the sacred language of Hinduism and Buddhism – in a drawing event led by artist Sarah Lawton, to create their own contribution and artwork. Booking essential. Free. All ages. Standpoint Gallery, 45 Coronet St, Haggerston, N1 6HD. Info: sarah@sharingthemaking.co.uk

Competition

Win tickets to 'Albee Vector
the Sound Collector'
at Arcola

FREE!!
Family
tickets

KIDS are in for a treat at this interactive production set to stimulate their imagination with a world of magic, music and humour.

The show follows Albee, a sound collector and his love, Andromeda, on a quest for beautiful sounds. These are running low in the world, so the duo need the audience's help to tell the story, as they encounter a witch, giant, and dangerously awful choir on the way. Lend a hand and capture sounds in a jar by making popping, fizzing, hissing, whizzing, whooshing, banging, crashing, and the occasional fart noise, as they battle kings, curses and the cruelty that stands in the duo's way.

With sounds that change colour, and try to escape, this show is sure to be a feast for the eyes and ears.

The show runs for 27, 28, 29 and 31 May at 2.30pm. Tickets £8.50.

For more info, visit: www.arcolatheatre.com/production/arcola/albee-vector-the-sound-collector

Hackney Today is giving away two family tickets (for up to five people) on any date of their choice to see 'Albee Vector the Sound Collector'.

REVIEW

Big Fish Little Fish Family Rave

10 May, Shapes, Hackney Wick, 117 Wallis Rd, E9 5LN

ONCE upon a time we dipped our faces in glitter, waved our glow sticks and danced to loud music in dark rooms, oblivious to the sun shining outside. Now we have kids, and we only dance at weddings. So thank God for Big Fish Little Fish, the team responsible for family raves for 'two to four-hour party people' for encouraging our disco spawn to get their gums around those glow sticks. The pram crew gathered in Hackney Wick on a beautiful Sunday, very much wishing they were heading for a quiet pint beside the canal. Inside, anarchy reigned: small people with painted faces threw shapes beneath a glitter canon, reached for the bubbles and plunged their tiny bodies into a ball pit.

Big people shuffled nostalgically to the banging beats being spun by James Tec and Little Chief's So Positive sound-system, and wondered why they never had a ball pit at Gatecrasher. Tiny babies snoozed on their parents' chests, oblivious to the musical education they were receiving. Everyone went home tired and happy, wondering how pieces of glitter and chunks of dry cereal always manage to find their way inside a nappy. PREVIEW

Stoke Newington Literary Festival

5-7 June, various Stoke Newington venues

NOW in its fifth year, the Stoke Newington Literary Festival keeps getting bigger and better. This year's programme, running from 5 to 7 June, has something for everyone. Still fired up by the election? Columnist Will Hutton casts a critical eye over our political landscape, while journalist, author and one of the country's most outspoken thinkers on multiculturalism, Yasmin Alibhai-Brown, is also talking at the event. Looking for a laugh? Funny woman finalist and Radio 4 star Viv Groskop is performing her stand-up show, while one of Britain's best TV comedy writers Jesse Armstrong talks to Guardian columnist Zoe Williams. Have to be in bed before then? Former Children's Laureate Michael Rosen might be more your scene. Along with illustrator Neal Layton, he'll be talking to young audiences about his new book, while craft and singing workshops for small people pepper the rest of the programme. Foodie fans will be tempted by award-winning food writer Diana Henry's talk and feminists, meanwhile, are catered for at a 'Deadlier Than The Male' event. Dig further into the programme and you'll find material for gardeners, historians, squatters, bloggers and aesthetes. And if by some miracle you don't fall into any of those categories, they've still got you covered: there's a pub quiz for 'Game of Thrones' fans on 5 June at The Prince too.

who lives in Poland, was so happy to hear that I had qualified. He won a big chess competition when he was younger and then taught me how to play. I'm really looking forward to the next stage of the competition."

The annual tournament, which began in April, continues over four stages and eight months. The best players go on to either a north or south Gigafinal, before the ultimate winner is decided in the National Terafinal at the end of the year.

Maths teacher Sue Caldwell, who runs The Urswick School's chess club and is a former member of the English

National Women's team, said: "I am absolutely delighted for Kacper, he will be competing with some of the best youngsters in the country. Chess is a popular activity at the school and Kacper has been a stalwart of the club since it started, often helping to teach the younger pupils."

Raising awareness of autism

A HACKNEY school for children with autism and learning difficulties raised awareness of the condition during a week of fundraising activities.

Many pupils at The Garden School, in Stoke Newington, have a diagnosis of Autism Spectrum Disorder or learning difficulties.

To celebrate World Autism Awareness Week (27 March to 2 April) they collaborated in a range of fundraising activities, from creating a piece of art from puzzle pieces, which represented the many parts of autism, to selling thousands of raffle tickets.

Students from Queensbridge Primary School, E8, also got involved, doing drama, dance and drumming projects with contemporaries at The Garden School. Over £1,000 was raised for a summer fun day for pupils in July.

Reading award for E8 school

QUEENSBIDGE Primary School in E8 has won an award for its contribution to raising children's literacy levels. Staff and children will take part in a presentation ceremony at the UCL Institute of Education on 26 June when they will receive the Reading Recovery Award.

The school was recognised for its high quality delivery of the Reading Recovery scheme, which offers six-year-olds, who are in the bottom 20 per cent of their class in terms of reading, daily half-hour sessions with specially trained teachers. At Queensbridge, two teachers run a reading programme, ensuring all Key Stage 1 and Reception children have daily, independent opportunities to read at their own level with a trained adult.

Sarah Bailey, Executive Head, said: "We're really thrilled to get this award. My wonderful staff deserve it so much. The children love it and it has a great impact on their reading development."

Jubilee Primary School pupils fly the flag for Hackney at Olympic taster sessions

JUBILEE Primary School flew the flag for Hackney in an event involving pupils from every London borough on 19 and 20 May.

The annual Schools Festival was held at Lee Valley Hockey and Tennis Centre in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park. Over 500 children from Years 3 and 4 were given expert hockey and tennis training.

Del Goddard, Lee Valley Leisure Trust Chairman, said: "It was great to see so many youngsters from across the region following in the footsteps of sporting stars and playing tennis and hockey here.

"For the majority of them, it will have been the first time they will have played these sports and we hope they will be inspired by their experience at this fantastic venue."

The children enjoyed games of 'Quicksticks' – a four-a-side version of hockey – and mini tennis to introduce them to the popular sports.

Both 'rush hockey' and 'hotshots tennis' sessions will also be running for five to 12-year-olds during the half-term holiday, between 26 and 29 May. Sessions cost £10 per person, per session.

Young people from Hackney have made a film to tackle negative perceptions of adolescents with charities Dogs Trust and Mouth That Roars

Paw-fectly friendly

YOUNG people from Hackney have made a film to tackle negative perceptions of teenagers by comparing it to the prejudice that Staffordshire Bull Terriers can also face.

Staff from the charity Dogs Trust have been working with seven young people at Hackney City Farm for several months, and the film is a result of discussions that highlighted how strongly they felt about negativity towards the breed.

Kelly Craig, from Dogs Trust, said: "The group were interested in how we could change the perception and negative stereotypes towards Staffordshire Bull Terriers. It quickly became clear that these feelings also resonated towards how they feel as young people.

“The group were interested in how we could change the... negative stereotypes towards Staffordshire Bull Terriers”

A poster with the message 'Dogs aren't toys, you can't sell them'

"Creating this video was a great opportunity for them not only to try to change perceptions, but to develop their skills in script writing, filming, interview techniques and, most importantly, teamwork and communicating with each other."

The Council takes in over 200 stray or abandoned dogs every year, the majority of which are Staffies. Nowadays they have a reputation as 'status dogs', but in the past they were known as 'nanny dogs' because they are so good with children.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Sadly there is a significant number of people who do not look after dogs properly, it's great that this project is helping to change perceptions. I hope that the young people involved in making the film spread the word amongst their peers and help produce the next generation of responsible dog owners."

'Changing Perceptions' was created by Hackney City Farm and Progress Park PRU, with support from Dogs Trust and youth media organisation Mouth That Roars.

Game, set and match for local 15-year-old tennis champ

A 15-year-old from Hackney Wick is pursuing her dream of playing at Wimbledon after winning the Nike Junior International Tournament in Nottingham last month. Lauryn John-Baptiste began her tennis career at Hackney City Tennis Club at the tender age of just three-and-a-half, winning an under-eights tournament in Clissold Park at four-years-old.

She was named the borough's under 13 sports person of the year (pictured) in 2011 and received the Council's Youth Sports Fund gold award to develop up-and-coming talent last year.

Lauryn is now a pupil at Talbot Heath School in Bournemouth, a boarding school with specialist tennis provisions. With four doubles titles under her belt, she has also been headhunted for a full scholarship to Florida University, in the USA, where she hopes to continue her education and training in September.

In the meantime, there is the small matter of her GCSEs and the possibility of qualifying for the Wimbledon Junior Championships in July.

'Don't judge Hackney's young people', says music video

MEMBERS of Hackney Youth Parliament (HYP) have produced a music video which they hope will help combat negative stereotypes of teens.

'You Don't Know (You Just Judged)' was written, recorded and filmed by members as part of their campaign to challenge people to look beyond appearance. Skye Fitzgerald McShane, 14, and Nia John, 15, introduced the video on behalf of the group at its premiere at the BFI Southbank earlier this month. The screening was part of a celebration of youth media produced by charity Adobe Youth Voices. Nia said: "I am doing this because I feel like young people are getting stereotyped and victimised because of their looks."

HYP members hope young people will watch and share the video via social media using the hashtag #youjustjudged. To see the video, visit: www.youtube.com/younghackney

Hackney takeaways sign up to healthier eating commitments

THE Council is working with Hackney's takeaways to encourage healthier eating among the borough's children and young people.

So far, 45 takeaways have signed up to the 'Healthy Catering Commitment', a London-wide scheme which recognises businesses that demonstrate efforts to reduce the level of saturated fat and salt content in their food. They do this by offering healthier options, for example water and low sugar drinks and snacks, and making smaller portions available on request.

The focus is currently on 86 takeaways that sell kebabs, chicken and fish and chips within one kilometre of Hackney's 'health heroes' primary schools. These are Nightingale, E5; St Scholastica's, E5; De Beauvoir, N1; Thomas Fairchild, N1; St Dominic's, E9; Orchard, E9; Southwold, E5; and Randal Cremer, E2 which already focus on healthy eating.

The Council aims to extend the project to takeaways across the borough, and cafes and restaurants at a later date.

Learn to take a break

By Dila Tumer

GCSES have come around again and, once more, students in Hackney have started to feel the undeniable pressure of exams.

Now, I know everyone has different ways of dealing with stress, but I never thought mindfulness or meditation could even be an option for me. Surely, it would just be a waste of my time – how would breathing with my arms sprawled out possibly help me?

All of my questions were answered on 13 May,

“I couldn't believe how good I felt afterwards. Calm, happy, friendly: the list could go on”

when I attended the 'Take A Pause' campaign launch at Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, where I participated in a mindfulness session.

From beginning to end there were smiles all round; sunlight was streaming through the blanket of leaves above me and magical melodies were travelling around the garden, from musicians playing flute and harp.

The session was mainly focused on learning how to control breathing and relax our bodies. We each sat on a yoga mat and learnt how to make a single breath travel from our chests to our diaphragms.

We were also encouraged to be actively aware of our surroundings, but not to give too much thought to them, and focus mostly on our breathing.

It doesn't sound like much on paper, but I couldn't believe how good I felt afterwards. Calm, happy, friendly: the list could go on.

Stress and mental ill health doesn't only affect students, they can be experienced by anyone. As a result, charity City and Hackney Mind, which organised the mindfulness event, offers a range of free, therapeutic groups and courses through its new Wellbeing Network to support residents improve their mental health.

Get creative: Hackney's mental health services celebrate 15 years of arts therapy

HACKNEY'S health services have been using art therapy to help those with mental illnesses for over 15 years – yet many people don't know this is available to them.

At the City and Hackney Centre for Mental Health, in Homerton hospital, art therapy is currently available to inpatients across all five acute wards, as well as two specialist wards: the PICU (psychiatry intensive care unit) and the mother and baby ward.

The range of services include painting and dance, and all aim to give patients the space for artistic self-expression in a safe environment, guided by a trained arts therapist.

Marianne Behm, Head of Art Therapy at Homerton, said: "We provide a creative space for people to express their feelings and experiences through the arts. This type of therapy can help people to restore a sense of meaning and hope on the path to recovery."

Sarah, a resident who has been involved with the arts therapy department for a year, agrees. She said: "It has given me a voice, and most importantly a big feeling of relief. Arts therapy has helped me to manage my wellbeing and with every session I feel like a burden has been lifted."

WW1's bolts from the blue

By Elizabeth Green

DURING the centenary of the First World War, Stoke Newington was the target of the first ever bombing raid on London as part of the conflict.

This little known fact is recorded in documents held by Hackney Archives, including this extract from the Hackney and Stoke Newington Recorder, of 2 May 1919.

"Following a glorious day, Stoke Newington, Hackney and Clapton folk were preparing for rest on that last night of May when the 'bolts from the blue' dropped, without notice, so far as the public were concerned. There was no 'first warning'.

"The streets still had their many late pedestrians when

'bang-bang' went some distant guns... the people were running about scared and excited, police whistles were going, and the clanging of the Fire Brigade bells, as appliances dashed out from Brooke Road, rent the air.

"This was just after 11 o'clock. Almost simultaneously, with these unusual scenes and sounds, was heard a series of explosions, and within a few minutes the sky in several directions was lit up by conflagrations of greater or lesser magnitude.

"One of these fires was in Alkham Road where a lady and her daughter had a narrow escape from an incendiary bomb that went through into the bedroom, setting the roof alight."

The first incendiary bomb dropped by a Zeppelin fell on Stoke Newington on 31 May 1915 affecting Nevill, Alkham, Brookland, Northwold, Shakespeare and Allen Roads. While there had been rumours about a possible air raid over London, most people did not take these seriously and, as a result it came as a shock. There was speculation that the Germans had been aiming for Stoke Newington railway station.

Other records show that Mr and Mrs Lovell, of 16 Alkham Road, had put their children to bed and Mr Lovell had just returned from posting a letter when he heard a cry from an upstairs bedroom. A bomb striking the chimney of a neighbouring home had hit their house and started a fire on the top floor. Fortunately all members of the household managed to escape, including two visitors staying on the top floor. Mr Lovell then took his son's bicycle and cycled to Brooke Road fire station. By the time he reached it the Fire Brigade had been inundated by calls to fires in the surrounding streets. Seven urgent calls were received by the fire station within four minutes.

The first casualties of the raid occurred in Cowper Street where the Leggatts lived with their five children. An incendiary bomb dropped on the back of the house where the children were sleeping and immediately burst into flames. Mr Leggatt bravely managed to save four of his children, suffering severe burns himself. However, three-year-old Elsie Leggatt didn't survive. Her sister May died a few days later in the Metropolitan Hospital.

As the Zeppelin moved southwards, the final casualties in the borough were at 187 Balls Pond Road, where the burned bodies of Mr and Mrs Good were discovered the next day, kneeling beside their bed. There is some confusion over why the Goods didn't manage to escape the building when other occupants did. Their escape route from the first floor had been blocked by the fire on the stairs, but another occupant of the first floor, Mrs Coningsby did manage to escape by jumping out of a window onto a blanket held by willing helpers below.

The Zeppelin continued over Stepney and Poplar dropping further bombs, before turning north-east to the sea. Official figures record seven killed, 32 injured, 87 incendiary and 25 explosive bombs dropped and 41 fires.

There were over 20 more raids on London between 1915 and 1918, six of them affecting Hackney.

“Within a few minutes the sky in several directions was lit up by conflagrations of greater or lesser magnitude”

Have your say on Hackney's Licensing Policy proposals

HACKNEY is one of London's top night-time destinations, and in the past four years the number of alcohol and entertainment licences granted in the borough has risen by a quarter.

Now the Council wants residents' views on proposals that aim to manage the growth of Hackney's night-time economy while balancing the needs of the people who live here.

Residents and businesses can have their say on a proposed extension to the Shoreditch Special Policy Area (SPA) south to the borough boundaries with the City, Islington and Tower Hamlets, and west to the Old Street Roundabout, along the southern part of City Road.

Other areas being consulted upon include a borough-wide policy with different opening hours for town centres and residential areas; the relaxation of the Dalston SPA; and new hours for restaurants, theatres and cinemas in town centres.

The proposals will only affect applications for new licences, or variations of existing licences. It would not stop new licenses from being granted, but it would enable the Council to manage the growth of entertainment and hospitality premises to ensure they do not have an adverse effect on the surrounding area.

The Council's current Licensing Policy has been in place since 2011 and by law a local authority has to review it at least once every five years.

To have your say, or for more info, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/licensing; or e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk

Consultation packs are also available from the Licensing Service and comments can be submitted to Freepost Hackney Licensing Service. Comments must be received by 5pm on 23 August.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sharon Patrick.
